

I had a dream on the morning of December 27, 2020.
Greg Hood - The War Tent

I dreamt there were several of us in a tent on the battlefield. In the tent were George Washington (he was General in the dream not the President), John Quincy Adams (I am a descendant of his), Dutch, Tom Schlueter, Jacquie Tyre, Tim Sheets and myself.

In the war tent as it was referred to in the dream, Washington was in front of a large table with maps rolled out on the table. General Washington was looking at the maps. He has some sort of a stick in his hand and he has moving the stick across the map pointing out a battle strategy. As he was moving his hand, Dutch was also moving his hand in sync with General Washington's hand tracing the strategy. I could see clearly that there was a red X over Washington DC on the map. I knew that this was the mission-DC.

As General Washington spoke, all in the room were listening intently and receiving the plan he was laying out. Tom Schlueter spoke up and said, "General, we will advance with you from Texas. Texas is with you." As Tom was speaking, a man walked up behind him and laid an old coat over Tom's shoulders. I knew in the dream that this coat was a mantel. It was a coat kind of like you would see in a western movie but not a long coat and more dressier. As the man laid this coat over Tom, I could see sewn in the coat just under the inside of the collar the initials SH. I knew right away the man was Sam Houston. Tom said, again, "we will advance with you. Texas will advance with you, General."

General Washington then said, "That's right Tom, we will advance, we will flank them. We will flank them from Texas and we will flank them from Georgia." At this time, Jacquie Tyre spoke up and said, "yes Georgia will advance with you." As Jacquie spoke, a man walked up from behind her and said, "you will need this to advance." He then laid a coat (mantle) on Jacquie's shoulder. In the dream he had mentioned to Jacquie that his name was Button. I found this to be an odd name for I have never heard of someone named Button. I was not sure in the dream where he was from or what his significance was in relation to him giving her his mantle. He then spoke again to Jacquie and said, "you have to know that you cannot finish as I finished. They (speaking of those who occupied DC that we were going to remove from power with this mission), are operating as I did in my last days. You cannot finish as I finished. Take this mantle and advance with the General." After receiving the mantle, Jacquie restated with much boldness, "Georgia will advance with you, General. We will be your flank."

At this time in the dream, John Quincy Adams was elbowing me in the arm saying, “speak up boy, say what I told you to say.” We both said in unison “Russia will not be a problem. Russia is on our side. The ekklesia in Russia is praying with us. They know of the assignment and they are praying.” General Washington nodded in agreement and rolled the map up and gave it to Dutch. At this time all of us in the war tent kept hearing a horse which was tied up outside blowing and snorting. We could tell he was pawing his foot on the ground. General Washington said to all of us in the tent, “Thats my house. He always gets stirred up when we go to battle. He knows it time for a fight.” He then said, “Dutch, take this map and this strategy and descend on DC. We are with you.” Dutch with a surprised look on his face said, “you will be with us? How will you be with us?” General Washington replied, “we are the cloud of witnesses. We are with you in this assignment. The battle has been decided. Victory has been decided and victory is ours, now carry it out.”

Before anyone could move, Tim spoke up and said, “before we go, before we leave the war tent we all must put this blue war paint on our faces. This is a must for us. As we go into DC all of those that are with us will know we are all on the same side and those against us will not be able to stop us.

I saw us exit the war tent and the dream ended.
